Involvement

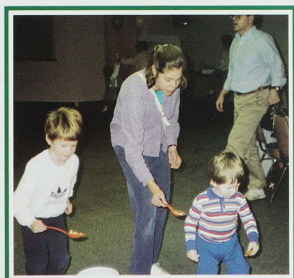

Q. Why are these people smiling? A. They're all RIC students who get involved! A great time can be had by all whether you're interested in going to a barbecue (top,mid.) or participating in the National Student Exchange Program (right,mid.).

RIC students show an awareness of their community and their generosity by holding an active and inventive children's fair and by participating in Aerobic Aid '92, a fund raiser for Rhode Island Project Aids.

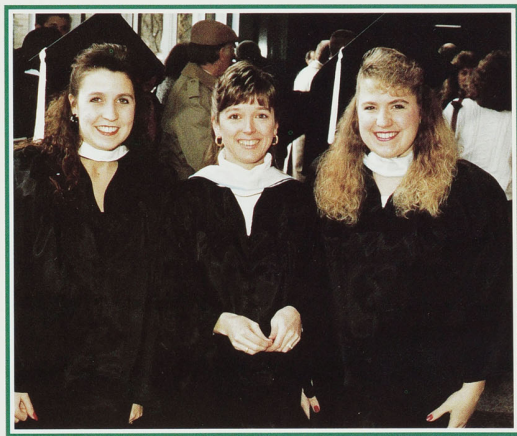

Campus Events

Celebration

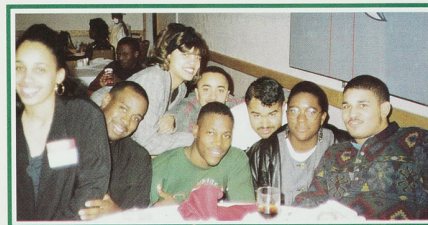

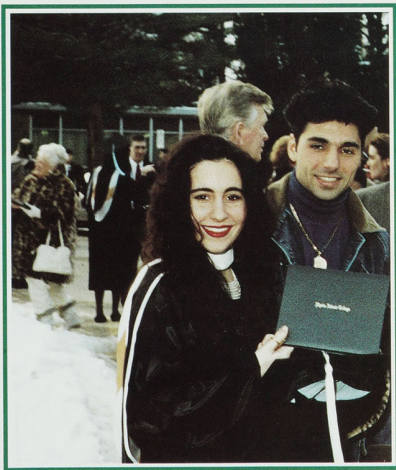

RIC students know how to have a good time whether they're celebrating Kwanzaa...

...or graduating after spending four years of late nights and long days of solving problems, studying and writing papers...

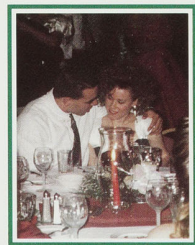

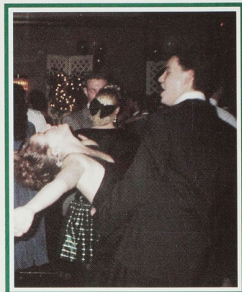

...or while smiling for the camera after dancing the night away at the Fall Classic.

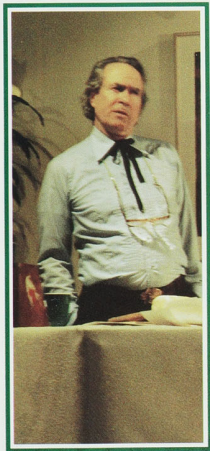

Celebration

Involvement

The 25th Annual Rhode Island College Art Club Auction was held on December 17, 1992.

Professor Enrico Pinardi of the RIC art dept. bid the auction a fond farewell after presiding over the event for the last 25 years.

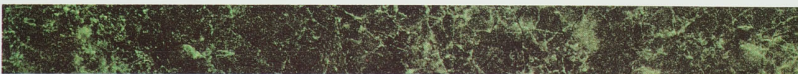

All of the works of art auctioned off, including those shown (ab.left, far left) by artist Brenda Pinardi, brought in over four hundred dollars for the Rhode Island College Art Club.

Volleyball Tournaments and RIC TAC-TOE are just two superb examples on the long, long list of on-campus events Rhode Island College offers to students. There's always something for everyone!

Holiday Events

Rhode Island College celebrates the holiday season with enthusiasm and style.

Even the seemingly endless supply of snow that fell on RIC last winter could not dampen the spirits of students or faculty. Everyone adhered to the "eat, drink and be merry" doctrine at the numerous holiday festivities. Each dorm held a holiday party and Donovan Dining Center offered up a feast which was open to the public. Harambee sponsored the multi-cultural Christmas celebration of Kwanzaa. Holiday gift giving was made easier by the crafts fair that was held in the Student Union Ballroom. The Kappa Delta Phi fraternity got into the spirit by sponsoring The Giving Tree Project which provided presents to underprivileged children. No matter what holiday you celebrate, RIC is the place to be!

Thorp Hall residents make the best of the cold and the snow by building both snowmen and snowwomen.

Students take a look at the Holiday Dinner from the upper level of Donovan Dining Center.

Native Rhode Island storyteller Len Cabral entertained at Kwanzaa.

Ren and Stimpy graced the Holiday Dinner with their presence.

Peter tells Santa what he wants for Christmas.

The Thorp Hall party attracted these hungry students.

Winter Wonderland

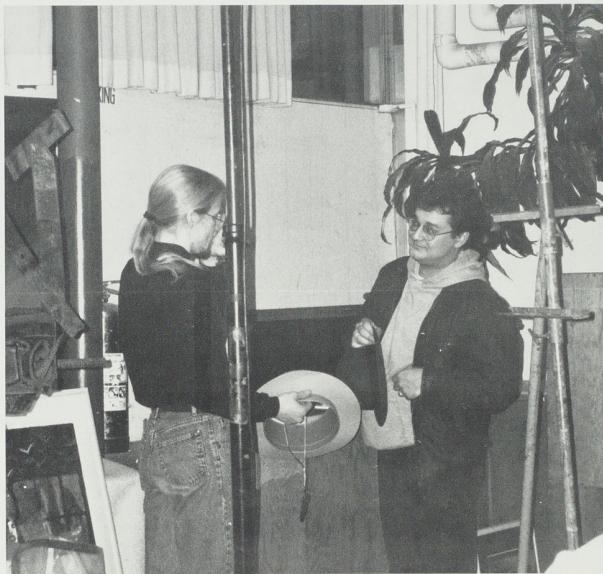

Winter events provided much needed relief from the weight of final exam anxiety. Relaxation was the rule at RIC for students who had spent most of their days and nights wading through mountains of notes, papers and books. The whole campus pitched and made the holiday season productive and enjoyable for everyone.

Paul Fata shows off one of his paintings at the Holiday Crafts Fair.

"Let it snow, let it snow, let it snow, and snow, and snow some more ..."

The 25th annual Art Club Auction drew a large crowd to RIC.

"Come on, girls, just a little nap."

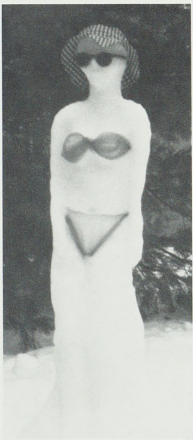

The two words a college student likes to hear the most: free food!

"Hmm, what do you get for the mom who has everything?"

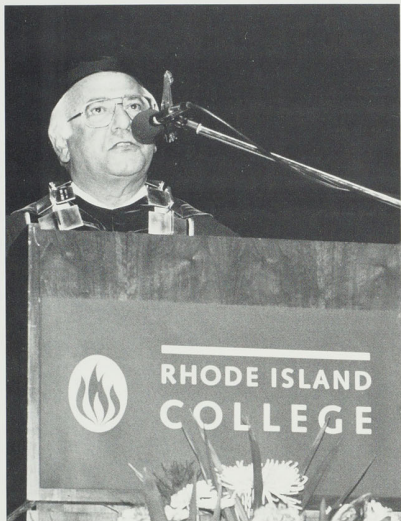

Kappa Delta Phi's gift drive made Christmas a little merrier for some needy kids.

"How did we get stuck with clean-up duty again?"

This bikini clad beauty graced the courtyard of Thorp Hall but, sadly, she did not tan very well.

Winter Commencement

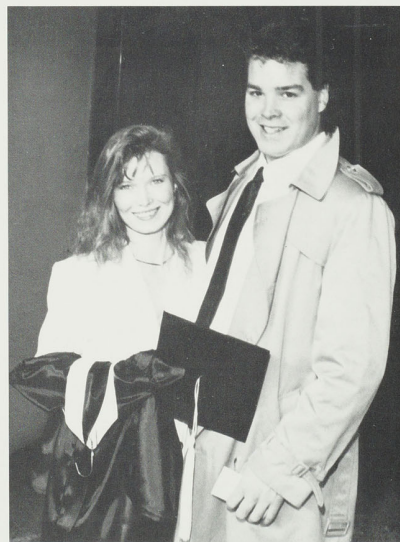

Rhode Island College President John Nazarian addresses the graduates at the last Winter Commencement ceremony. Due to budgetary and time constraints, winter graduates will now attend Spring Commencement which will be split into two separate dates. Undergraduate and graduate students will attend different ceremonies to receive their degrees.

Winter Commencement

Family and friends offer their congratulations to the joyous graduates.

"Get a little closer, don't be shy."

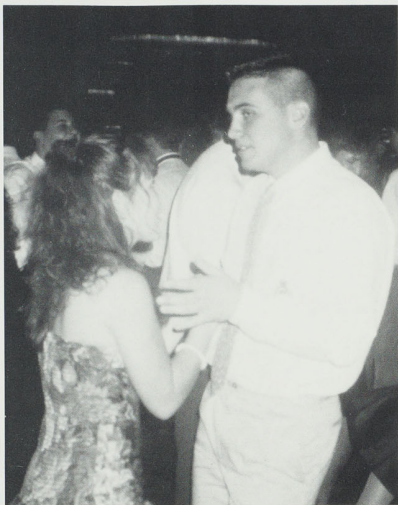

This happy couple shows off a pair of million dollar smiles.

"We promised each other all the slow dances, didn't we, honey?"

Fall Harvest Classic

Storgy Awards

Giving credit where credit is due is the express purpose of the Storgy Awards. Student Community Government, Inc. sponsored the event for the ninth year in a row. These Student Organization awards were presented in categories ranging from the Best Cooperative Program to the Biggest Flop of the Year which went to RIC's Haunted House. Mark Paolucci and Kristen King received the hard earned Outstanding Faculty/Staff Advisor award for their tireless work with many student organizations. Congratulations to all the winners!

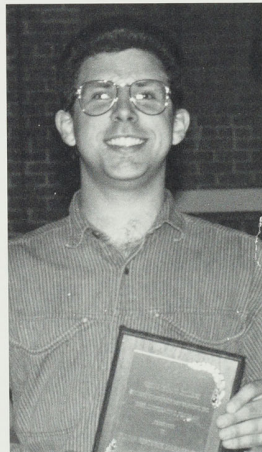

The Spaghetti Warehouse provided the forum as well as the food.

Big Winners

The Anchor took home the Most Innovative and Most Creative Public Relations awards. Both were related to the October 26 "Special 'safe sex' issue" (a.k.a. Condom issue). This special issue done to promote safe sex was socially conscious and earned special attention both on and off campus.

Sampling the offerings at the pizza tasting contest sponsored by The Anchor.

Rhode Island College Programming sponsored all of the RIC End events. Everyone was entertained by acts ranging from R rated hypnotist Frank Santos, a RIC favorite, to the multi-talented acts of the RIC-Apalooza Festival. The more adventurous of us tried human bowling and sumo wrestling. For the musically inclined, there was the Rock Hunt and singer/musician John Reno. Did ya know? There was something for everyone.

RIC End Events

RIC end is a time for all RIC students to relieve stress before the big crunch of final exams. This year we were treated by Programming, the Campus Center staff, and the student organizations on campus to a week that was chock full of entertainment and activities. The legendary rock/punk band the Ramones played to a rowdy crowd in the Donovan Dining Hall/Convention Center and Music Hall. Presumably because the fine arts center took one look at Mr. Joey Ramone and friends and balked out on the deal. A WISE CHOICE. The band brought down the dining hall (renovations are now underway and should be completed by fall). A great way to see out the old Donovan and say hello to the new.

The reggae band plays on to a hyped up crowd.

The International Fair, which took place during RICend on the quad in front of the library, gave students an opportunity to experience many different cultures and peoples in a day's time. Natives of each country were available to answer questions, present displays and sell imported goods.

These students are celebrating the end of the semester, the beginning of summer and for the few, the proud, the seniors, graduation. Hopefully, you too took some time out of your busy spring semester schedules to enjoy the fun, the new-found sun, and whatever else satiated your long winter longings. If not, there's always next year if you're an underclassman!

These faculty members and students took time out to enjoy Donovan's end of the year dinner.

EXODUS 1993 Photography Contest

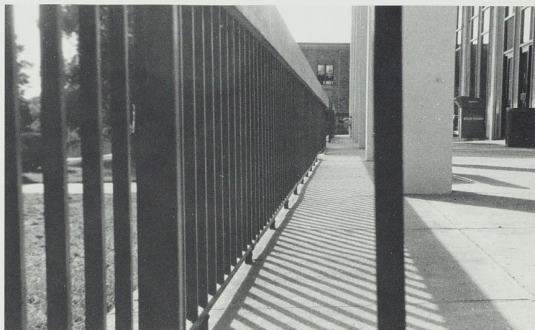

This year the yearbook staff decided to host a campus wide photo contest which any student or faculty member could submit snapshots of life at RIC to, in order to get more support for the yearbook and to provide a showcase for the variety of events, lifestyles, and views.

For the 1994 Photo Contest the Yearbook Staff will be handing out rolls of film to students and faculty during September which will be due back in our office in the student union building, room 304 within 24 hours. The new title of the contest will be "24 HOURS AT RIC".

Casino Night

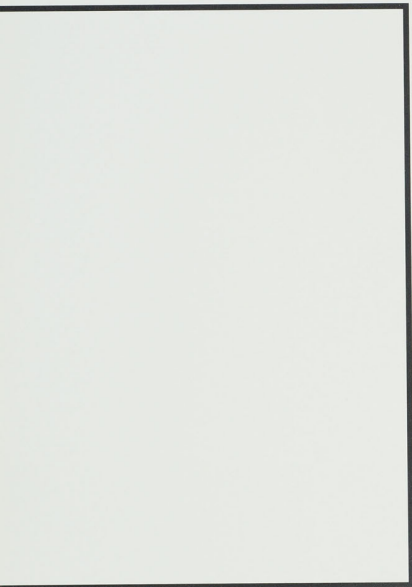

This wide eyed dealer waits for his victims to place their bets.

Tonight, it's Rhode Island College. Next year, you'll see RIC students running the tables in Vegas. Everybody gambled away their hard-earned cash at roulette wheels and poker tables. The dealers were black-jack bandits in bow ties who dealt like seasoned professionals. The Campus Center sponsored this night of fun and games of chance that separated the winners and the losers.

"Please, God, let me win just one hand. I promise I'll never gamble again as long as I live. Amen."

This lucky lady is going home a winner tonight.

Bay Queen Cruise to Newport Harbor

Each year during Senior Week, RIC students flock to Warren, Rhode Island to partake in the festivities on the vessel Bay Queen, which cruises the bay area with a final destination of Newport, R.I. Food, fun and frolic are all requirements for this joyous occasion, as well as dancing the night away, of course.

Medieval Manor

RIC seniors made a trip to downtown Boston and suddenly found themselves transported back to merry old England. They were entertained by a Shakespearean troupe who encouraged and practically enforced audience participation. The king ran his court of rowdy students with an iron-clad sense of humor. Chivalrous gentlemen and ladies fair had enjoyed themselves by the score.

Spring Commencement

The scene was both festive and anxious on the bright sunny day of May 22. The graduating class of 1993 received advice to challenge what they know and to be passionate and bold in their lives. For 975 students, years of hard work came to fruition on one day that will become a cherished memory. Congratulations!

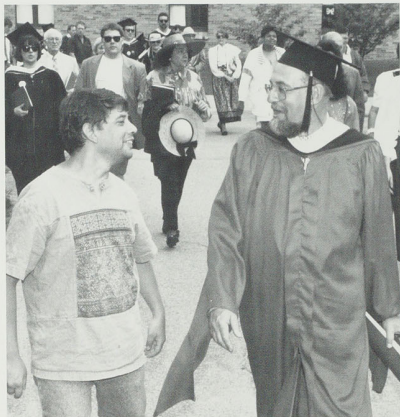

President John Nazarian hands out a degree.

Spring Graduation

Senior Sean Thomas enjoys an ale with a friend.

This group of RIC students can spot a great party from a mile away. The RIC Gone Mad Senior Week Event was by far the best off-campus party RIC has ever seen!

RIC Goes Mad at the Keg Room

Ric students had a chance to blow off some steam after finals with a huge party put on by our friends at the Keg Room in downtown Providence, a popular college hangout for upperclassmen. The band "Five Gone Mad" provided the entertainment with covers of songs by U2, the Doors, the B-52's, and REM which shook the walls and brought the crowd down.

"Can't you see we're trying to get beer?"

"Boy, this buffet is good!"
