Rhode Island College of Education

PURPOSE

According to the Act of the Legislature establishing Rhode Island College of Education, the chief purpose of the College "shall be the preparation of teachers, principals, supervisors and superintendents for service in the public schools of Rhode Island." The Trustees have accordingly established courses of study leading to preparation for service in the various kinds of educational work. There are courses for teachers from the kindergarten to the high school, courses for supervisors and administrative officers, courses for librarians, courses leading to the degree of Bachelor of Education and to the degree of Master of Education. In addition to the regular daily work of the school year there are classes in the late afternoons and on Saturdays, as well as during the summer session, for teachers already in service. The growth in attendance since the change from Normal School to College is sufficient evidence of a sincere attempt to meet the requirements of the act of incorporation. The record is as follows:

	1920-1	1921-2	1922-3	1923-4
Registration at regular sessions.....	322	500	527	607
Total registration for college work, including afternoon, Saturday, and Summer students, with no names counted twice.....	700	1,683	1,573	2,042

Attendance at the regular sessions has increased 120% in five years since the low record following the war, and has increased more than 30% since the former high record just before the war. It should be stated in addition that for the last two years the College has been able to accept only about one-half of the applicants for admission.

The total registration as shown above, includes what is being done for the teachers already in service. The gain here has been from 700 in 1920-21 to over 2,000 in 1923-24.

The Need for Trained Teachers

There is still a serious need for trained teachers, even in Rhode Island, which is outranked by no other state in the average amount of training given to all its teachers. This need is shown partly by the number of untrained teachers still in the schools, and partly by the crowded condition of most of the schools of the State, due to the inability to secure enough teachers and to the lack of school accommodations. It will be many years before the need throughout the country can be met. Increasingly heard is the slogan, "A trained teacher and a fair chance for every child."

The Practical Nature of an Education for Teaching

An education designed for the training of teachers must prove to be a practical preparation for leadership in any field of usefulness because:

1. It is based on a thorough mastery of that knowledge which is known as the "fundamentals." Students in their haste to enter new fields of learning too often neglect such a mastery, although by it, throughout their lives, their education will be judged.
2. It begins with an analysis of the process of learning. The student becomes proficient in the art of learning through his study of the art of teaching. He thus becomes better fitted for rapid advancement in his later studies.
3. It is more than a study about something. It carries with it at all times the practical application of the study. Students must learn to do and to be, as well as to think and to know.
4. Its subject matter has to do with the ideas and ideals of everyday life.
5. It develops initiative, resourcefulness, and leadership.
6. It gives an art that is essential in all professions. Whatever one wishes to accomplish with or through others, he is successful in securing the desired results in proportion as he knows how to teach.
7. It carries with it an assurance of success, not merely in the realm of study, but in making one's way in the world.
8. It gives a preparation for most significant usefulness in training the rising generation for citizenship, a profession that challenges the finest qualities of character and culture. No other calling offers greater opportunity for service to one's own generation and to the generations of the future.

Clinics and Laboratories

In order that the training may be as practical and thorough as possible, the College of Education maintains its educational clinics and laboratories, which are believed to be as important for its purposes as are the clinics and laboratories of the other professions.

The Henry Barnard School in the College Building, is used as a model school for purposes of observation and demonstration, and for the preliminary training of the student-teachers. In this school, from the beginning of their course to the end, students observe good teaching, and come into immediate contact with children and with the details of their education. That this school is appreciated is shown by the fact that it is visited each year by more than a thousand teachers and school officers.

Through no other part of the course does the student make such rapid strides as during the half-year of teaching in the outside training schools. The system used in Rhode Island differs to some extent from that used in most of the other states. It is the result of progressive development through many years, and has been given high commendation by educators who are familiar with the various methods in use in different parts of the country. Further details concerning courses of study and the system of training schools will be found later in this catalog.

A Four-Year Course of Preparation for Teaching

With a growing appreciation throughout the country of teaching as a profession, and with a better understanding of the value of a thorough preparation for teaching, the need for a four-year course has been apparent. Rhode Island now offers the opportunity for such a course, an outline of which will be found on the following pages.

The Admission of Men Students

In former years the admission of men students was discouraged, but with the adoption of a four-year course men were first admitted in 1921-2. Each year since has seen such a generous increase that an attendance of at least fifty may be expected within the next two years. The educational field for men is so large, and the course at the College of Education of so great practical value, that a still larger proportion of men students may be expected with the succeeding years. Good standing, fine character, and high ideals are essential, not merely for admission, but for success in the profession.

THE FACULTY

The members of the Faculty have been selected with great care for their several fields. Evidence of scholarly attainment and successful experience was given in the catalog for 1923. For the present it is sufficient to state that for the year 1924-5 it expected that the Faculty will include four Doctors of Philosophy and one Doctor of Medicine, together with eight Masters of Art and one Master of Education. While it is evident that degrees alone cannot make the teacher, the College of Education is fortunate in having this proof of research and of scholarly ability in its faculty.

GENERAL INFORMATION

The college maintains no dormitory, but those who wish to board in the city will be aided in securing accommodations. The President especially recommends the St. Maria Home on Governor street and the Young Women's Christian Association on Washington street. Students should consult the President before engaging board elsewhere, as they will be permitted to board only in places approved by him.

A school lunch room is maintained, subject to the general control of the President at which wholesome lunches may be obtained every school day. As a part of the expense of the lunch room is borne by the college, the prices are kept at the lowest point consistent with good materials and efficient service.

Textbooks and ordinary supplies are furnished to all students free.

A limited amount of aid may be given to students in the upper classes through the students' loan fund. This fund, amounting to about $1,200 has been given by graduating classes and alumni during the past few years. The fund is deposited with the State Treasurer.

The library facilities of Providence are unusually extensive. In addition to the large and carefully selected college library, there are at the service of the student the Providence Public Library, the Providence Athenæum, the Library of the Rhode Island Historical Society, and the State Library.

The Providence Public Library offers to all students of the college, upon the same conditions as to residents of the city, the use of its large and carefully chosen collection. Departments especially valuable to the college students are the Harris Collection on Slavery and the Civil War, the Educational Study-room, the "Standard Library" of best literature, the Reference Department, and the Children's Room. The library staff co-operates heartily in making known to the students the resources of the library, both by lectures to classes and by special assistance to individuals.

Graduates from all courses in the Rhode Island College of Education may now secure admission to advanced standing in many colleges and universities, where they will receive due credit leading to degrees in education.

THE HENRY BARNARD SCHOOL

The Henry Barnard School, on the first floor of the college building, comprises a kindergarten (Children's School), and eight grades, with one room for each. Most of the children come from the city district adjoining the building. Others from outside the district may be admitted on the payment of a moderate tuition, if there is room for them. A new building for this school is to be erected as soon as possible, leaving the entire present building for the College students.

The functions served by the Henry Barnard School are as follows:

1. It furnishes opportunity for the students of the College of Education to see good teaching. It supplies illustrative material for class discussion on methods. Lesson plans may here be tested and criticised from experience, instead of on a theoretical or imaginary basis. It is to the college what the clinic is to the school of medicine. It helps to keep the work of the college on the right basis by constantly magnifying the practical instead of the theoretical. It gives a worthy ideal to the prospective teacher.
2. It furnishes under the most helpful and encouraging conditions an opportunity for the young teacher to begin her practice teaching. For one hour of the day the school may be used for this work. The rest of the day the children spend under the regular grade teachers. By having this preliminary practice so closely connected with the study of methods, something more is added to the discussions than could be gotten from observation alone. At the same time the student has an opportunity to do his first teaching in a most stimulating environment, and with little responsibility for the general discipline of the room. His first effort may thus be given to a masterly presentation of his subject unhampered by needlessly disturbing conditions. He gains confidence in his own ability, learns to be critical of himself and to accept criticism from others, and in a measure gets the professional point of view, which is, essentially that by continued endeavor and the wise use of aids of various sorts, it is possible to improve continually in skill and in general teaching ability. He is brought to a recognition of the fact that good teaching is fundamental to discipline. It follows that the young teacher is here trained to emphasize the essential matters, and is well fitted for the next step in his preparation, the training school.
3. It is a meeting place for theory and practice in the school itself, offering to teachers in the different departments facilities for testing themselves and their own methods in the light of experience with the children for whom the work is intended.
4. It should illustrate for those teaching elsewhere the methods and courses recommended by the College of Education. The Henry Barnard School, as a school of observation, should be the model school through which the State may present, as far as possible, its ideal of a satisfactory public school. It should not attempt to carry on its work expensively or to include courses which may not to advantage be included in other public schools. Its aim should be to show how a course of study that is truly efficient in its results may at the same time be conducted with economy.
5. It provides opportunity for the study and evaluation of new ideas which seem to give special promise of educational worth.

Children's School

The Kindergarten or Children's School is the result of several years of first-hand educational experimentation with children from three to six years of age. It is, moreover, an educational experiment in process. No estimable contribution from any worthy educational source or system is excluded. The school purposes real education from the sincere study of young children. It is coming to be recognized more and more that children under the usual school age have intellectual needs that are greatly and generally overlooked.

Elementary School

The spirit of the Children's School has propelled itself into the grades beyond. It is intended that there shall be no realizable break in the education of children as they pass from the kindergarten to the first grade or from one grade to another. The equipment and methods of instruction of the Elementary School are of the type that allows the process of education to proceed naturally and directly in a socialized environment. The Henry Barnard School is really a laboratory where it is possible to observe pedagogy in the making. Experimentation with the reading process in particular is revealing on the part of the pupils possibilities which are remarkable. Owing to the peculiar nature of the training received, the children, besides learning to read and write, have become independent workers, able to master many difficulties for themselves. They have therefore been given much freedom in the selection of their reading, and of other individual and group work as well. There is little class drill except such as is self imposed, but much individuality and spontaneity.

It has been a task of no small difficulty to find books of a suitable nature for the children of these grades, as they read eagerly and with surprising discrimination, and soon tire of books that are too easy for them.

Music

The reorganization of the course in music has been constantly progressive throughout the present year. Education in music begins in the Children's School. The ordinary meagre type of musical training usually accorded to young children is replaced by an enriched and happy opportunity for spontaneous music interpretation, expression, and appreciation. The pupils of the Henry Barnard School are encouraged to sing almost as freely as they talk. Both individual and chorus singing have proper place in the schedule. Abundant opportunity is given for free expression in response to rhythm. Interest in orchestral instruments is fostered by the use of a playing orchestra with a child conductor. Music appreciation through active listening is an important phase of the enriched course.

Visiting Day at Henry Barnard School

Visitors to the Henry Barnard School are welcome at all times. It is found, however, that visiting teachers desire to propose many questions as to the methods and materials in use in the Children's School and in the various grades. It is obviously impossible to give time every day to the conferences which these necessary demands involve. Since it is the desire of the Rhode Island College of Education that observers should receive all the attention and help which they seek, the program for Fridays has been arranged so as to meet this need. Friday, then, will be recognized as the most satisfactory visiting day.

THE TRAINING SCHOOLS

The training schools are established by contract with the local authorities. The schools used for training purposes are indicated by the list of critic teachers given in this catalog. Critic teachers are nominated by the Trustees of the College and elected by the School Committees in the towns in which they serve. Each critic in the regular grades is given charge of two rooms, with the usual number of children and a student teacher is assigned to each room.

The buildings in which the training schools are located range all the way from two to thirty rooms in size.

During the first half of the year, through the courtesy of the Providence School Department, to meet an unusual situation, students were assigned to 22 additional schools in that City.

The Rhode Island system of training schools embodies to a remarkable extent the recommendations of the "Report of the Committee of Fifteen on the Training of Teachers." After the first preliminary teaching in the Observation School, student teachers are trained, not by making them assistants or substitutes, or by giving them small groups of children, but by placing them in charge of regular schools under such conditions as they will meet after graduation. Here during the five months of training they are thrown on their own resources to a large extent. They learn to master the work of one grade and to teach with due regard for the development of the children; and they gain that close contact with child life, so essential to a good teacher, which can be gained only by one who is in charge of his own school.

Mileage and Car Fares

The special fund for mileage is distributed as indicated below among the residents of the State who are entitled to free tuition. The amount each receives, up to a maximum of $80 a semester, is proportionate to the number of days attendance and to the distance the student must travel in coming from his home to the college. Students who reside less than five miles from the college are not entitled to mileage, unless this is ordered by the Committee on mileage for special reasons. One half of the annual appropriation for mileage is distributed at the end of each semester. Students boarding in Providence receive the same mileage as if they lived at home.

Student teachers assigned to training schools in places in which they reside receive no mileage, but may receive reimbursement for payment of car fares between their homes and Providence, or elsewhere, when such travel is required by the college.

Student teachers not residing in Providence and assigned to training schools in that city are entitled to mileage as when attending the college, but do not receive payments for car fares. Student teachers residing in Providence or the non-mileage zone and assigned to training schools in other towns are entitled to receive full remuneration for the payment of car fares between their homes and their training schools. Students whose assignments require them to come through Providence receive mileage as when attending the college and, in addition, are entitled to full remuneration for car fares from Providence to their training schools. It is expected that in other cases the student teachers will receive mileage or car fares not to exceed the cost of travel required by the college. No assignment can be made which shall incur an expense of more than fifty cents a day for car fares, exclusive of mileage, except by vote of the Trustees.

REQUIREMENTS FOR ADMISSION

As state certificates for practice teaching in the training schools may not be given to students under nineteen years of age, it is expected that candidates for admission will be at least very nearly seventeen before entering. Experience has shown that it is wise for those who have completed the secondary school course at an earlier age to do further work in preparation for entering before applying for admission to the College of Education.

Each candidate must present a written testimonial of moral character, a certificate of graduation from an approved course in an approved high school, or satisfactory evidence of an equivalent education, and should be definitely recommended by the principal of the secondary school as a suitable candidate for admission. In addition each must be certified by the college physician as to good health and freedom from serious physical defects.

No one can be admitted who does not agree to the following:

Form of Student's Agreement

In consideration of my admission as a student to the Rhode Island College of Education and of the professional training afforded me therein, I hereby agree to teach in the public schools of Rhode Island for at least two years after having attended said school, unless excused therefrom by the Board of Trustees of said college. I declare in good faith that I fully expect to complete one of the prescribed courses of study in said school and to follow teaching as a regular occupation.

An Entrance Examination is now Required

The College of Education appreciates the hearty response which has been made to its appeal for more students. It is a matter of deep regret that some who may wish to enter may not be able to secure admission, although the need is still great for trained teachers. The only plan which has seemed to be at all satisfactory is to require of all applicants that they take together a modern scientific test calling for the mental response necessary for successful teaching. According to the results of this test as large a number as can be cared for will be accepted from each town and city in the State.

All who wish to enter in September of 1924 must therefore be present at 2 o'clock on Monday, June 23. The examination will last one hour. It is expected that the entire quota to be admitted in September will be accepted at this time. For admission in January, 1925, the examination will be held at 2 o'clock on Monday, January 12, 1925.

High School Subjects Required

In general the requirements for admission should represent not less than 15 standard units.

The high school course to be chosen should be such as would be accepted for admission to the New England colleges, and should include the following:

An equivalent of the college requirements in English.

Successful study of at least one foreign language for at least two years.

Laboratory courses in both physics and chemistry sufficient for the college entrance requirements.

At least two years of work in history.

The usual course in high school mathematics.

A review of arithmetic, grammar, physiology, history of the United States and of Rhode Island, and geography.

Some elementary training in music.

An equivalent of at least two periods a week for two years in drawing.

Students desiring to enter the Library Course should show special aptitude in literature and a good working knowledge of books and language.

Students desiring to enter the Kindergarten-Primary Course must pass an examination in music, both oral and instrumental.

All students are expected to be able to read music.

COURSES AND DEGREES

Requirements for the Course of Study Leading to the Degree of Master of Education

Adopted March 5, 1924, and ordered to be in force on and after September 1, 1925.

1. The candidate must hold a bachelor's degree from an institution approved by the Trustees.
2. The candidate must submit evidence of his successful experience in teaching for three years.
3. For the completion of the course, advanced study equivalent to fifteen hours a week for one year will be required.
4. Not more than one-fourth of the time specified may be accounted for the preparation of a thesis on an approved subject.

5. The subject and outline of the thesis must be approved by the Faculty of Instruction and presented for such approval at least four months before the date of graduation.

6. Courses to be pursued must be related to the end in view and must be approved by the Faculty of Instruction.

7. All work shall be done in residence unless otherwise provided by concurrent action of the Trustees and Faculty.

8. All work to be accepted must be performed with distinction.

Requirements for the Degree of Bachelor of Education

The degree of Bachelor of Education will be conferred upon the successful completion of any one of the following four-year courses. These courses are in the following pages outlined in the order here given.

1. The four-year course based on full college entrance requirements.
2. A one-year course for graduates of approved colleges.
3. The senior course of one and one-half years for those who have completed the junior course, of the College of Education.
4. A two-year course for graduates of two-year normal schools, and for students with two years credit in approved work in approved colleges.

The Four-Year Course.—A new four-year course has been planned for students who expect to continue their studies throughout the four years. This course is not intended primarily for the preparation of high school teachers or superintendents, although the certificates given are valid for such purposes. The College of Education will not lose sight of the fact that the most important teaching may be done in the elementary grades. Highly skilled professional teachers, with a background of cultural education in liberal arts, are needed in all kinds of school work.

It has been found possible in the new course to give more time in the first years to work in English, to freshman college mathematics, to modern language, history, and other subjects, at the same time distributing the distinct courses in education over a somewhat longer period than is possible under the former plan. The half-year of training may be placed in the sixth instead of in the fifth semester. It is believed that the new course will meet the needs of students desiring to complete at once the work necessary for a degree. In the later years of the course opportunity will be given for preparation along lines needed for teaching special subjects or for teaching in special types of schools or in particular grades.

During 1924-25 only the work of the first year of this course will be offered. It will be necessary, for the sake of economic management, to offer this course only to groups of sufficient size.

The Two-Year Advanced Course.—This course will contain studies from the Junior Course and from the Senior Course, the program being arranged in each case according to the previous preparation of the student.

The Junior Course.—As announced in January, 1924, by vote of the Trustees there will be no graduation from the Junior Course after the summer of 1926, although certificates will still be given for the completion of this course. Graduation will then mean only graduation with a degree. The $2\frac{1}{2}$ year course remains, but it leads, for students entering at this time, to a certificate to teach, not to graduation, except by the completion of balance of the four-year course.

The Kindergarten-Primary Course.—Those who wish to teach only in the kindergarten or in the primary grades are given 500 periods in special reparation and kindergarten training in place of an equal amount of work in the regular course.

The Library Course.—Library students substitute 860 periods of library courses, as shown in the detailed outline, in place of an equivalent amount of work in the regular course.

The Co-operative Course.—Students may spend two years at the College of Education and two years at the State College, receiving at the end the degree Ed. B. from either institution. The two years at the College of Education will include all the regular courses in education and the half-year of practice teaching.

COURSES OF INSTRUCTIONS

A separate bulletin will be issued later outlining the subject matter to be included under each course to be offered.

COURSES FOR TEACHERS

In addition to the regular daily sessions, the College of Education has maintained courses for teachers through its summer sessions and through the Afternoon and Saturday Classes throughout the year. These classes for the year 1923-4 have for the first time been maintained for the full year, instead of as formerly for a period of twenty weeks during the middle of the year. For 1924-5 it is expected that the afternoon classes will continue throughout the two semesters, but that the Saturday classes will begin September 27 and continue through the winter, ending in March. In 1923-4 classes have been held in Pawtucket, Newport, and Westerly, as well as at the College. For the coming year courses will be offered in still other places.

The following schedules show the courses offered in the school year 1923-4, and the outline for the summer of 1924.

SUMMER SESSION, JUNE 30 TO AUGUST 8, 1924

The Trustees and Faculty of the College of Education take pleasure in presenting a much more extensive program of summer courses than has ever before been possible.

All courses are open, under the regulations stated, to Rhode Island teachers and to those who are preparing to teach in this State. Teachers from other states may be admitted to classes that have not already reached the limit of attendance, on payment of tuition at the rate of $10 for each course, or $25 for three or more courses.

Owing to the impossibility of registering teachers at the last moment, and to the necessity for keeping all classes with reasonable limits as to size, it becomes necessary to insist on advance registration. All applications for admission should be received not later than Monday, June 23. This will make it possible for each instructor to have a list of his expected students on the first morning of the term.

It will be noted that the daily program is continuous, from 9:20 to 3:15 each day, with no assigned lunch period. The Students' Lunch Room will be open from 11:40 to 1:40, so that students may use a part of the 3d, 4th, or 5th periods for lunch. Students are not expected to register for more than four hours of work. If for any reason a fifth is allowed, either the 3d or the 4th period must be left free for lunch and for rest.

A part of the courses are intended to meet the requirements for teachers' certificates; others represent definite parts of the regular college courses. The subjects to be taken must in every case meet the approval of the Faculty Committee and of the President.

Applicants for registration are reminded that promptness and regularity in attendance are essential if credit is to be given.

Several new names will be found on the list of instructors, as follows:

Dr. Paul C. Saunders received his training in Alfred University, Columbia University, University of Wisconsin, and University of Pittsburgh, and is now Acting Professor of Chemistry in Howard College, Birmingham, Alabama.

Albert O. Goodale, is head of the Department of Education at Salem Normal School.

Dr. Paul N. Garber, with his doctor's degree from the University of Pennsylvania, is Instructor in History at Brown University.

Miss Lillian E. Swan is an artist of note as well as a successful teacher of art. She is a graduate of Rhode Island School of Design, having previously completed the two-year course at the College of Education. Further years of special study in New York, and eight years as supervisor of art in Northern Michigan Normal College, are sufficient indications of her value as a teacher.

Miss Mary A. Weber, recently from the Horace Mann School for Girls, at Teachers College, is already on our staff in the afternoon courses.

Mlle. Lucinne Petit is Professor of French at Wheaton College. She was an exchange student from France, and holds a degree from the University of Minnesota.
