Class Hymn.

Let us pause for a while ere we take this last step,
And enter the conflict of life.

Our school days are over ; each part must be played,
Whether evil or good in the strife.

The tasks we've performed in our childhood and youth,
Are but earnest of what must be done.

The years that have gone with their lessons of truth,
Will assist in the years still to come.

There is joy in each heart which we would not conceal,
To think of the work that is done ;

But beneath all our mirth, there's a sadness as real
That casts a shade over each one.

But with courage and strength let us ever strive on
With the fullest and sweetest accord.

That our hearts may rejoice when we hear the glad words :
As the work even so the reward.
