Award for Excellence in the Arts. The award, which will be officially presented at a $250-a-plate black-tie dinner at the Westin Hotel in Providence Jan. 9, "pays tribute to your artistic achievements and is intended to support the continuation of your work with a grant of $3,000," wrote Roger Mandle, president of the Rhode Island School of Design, on behalf of the committee organizing the Pell Awards.

As a winner, Stillman also was cited for achievement over a sus-

The Champlin Foundations and Ocean State Charities Trust gifts total more than $100,000

Funds to support the teaching of science and technology projects at RIC

Hundreds of school children, college students, and the general public will benefit from grants recently awarded to Rhode Island College by The Champlin Foundations and Ocean State Charities Trust.

According to Marguerite M.

"A gift to Rhode Island College is a gift to the people and future health and welfare of this state," – Marguerite M. Brown, development director

Brown, RIC director of development, the combined total is $101,732, including $5,400 from Ocean State Charities Trust for the K.I.T.E.S. Project, and the remainder from The Champlin Foundations for Adams Library ($37,000) and the Department of Biology ($59,332).

"This money will provide significant advances in scientific and computer equipment needed by the College," Brown said. "We are grateful that The Champlin Foundations and Ocean State Charities Trust agreed with the proposals presented and decided to afford RIC the funding to move forward in these areas."

(This is the first time RIC has received funding from Ocean State Charities Trust. The Champlin Foundations had made awards in 1993 and 1994.)

She said that "fundors are very impressed when we remind them that 92 percent of our students are Rhode Islanders and that two-thirds of our over 40,000 alumni live and work in the Rhode Island area. A gift to Rhode Island College is a gift to the people and future health and welfare of this state."

The $59,332 award for the biology department will be used to purchase 50 Carlsan binocular compound light microscopes, 50 Carlsan stereo dissection microscopes and to renovate Fogarty Life Science room 123 into a new teaching laboratory equipped with lab benches and stools and microscope storage cabinets.

Biology department Chair Jerry Melaragno said the facilities renovation and new equipment means "an improvement of biology experiences for future science educators...and will have a significant impact on the educational experiences of all students taking introductory biology laboratory courses." Melaragno said over 1,000 student take biology classes each year.

"The new microscopes will replace 30 year old" models, he said. This will improve the learning and teaching environment for students and faculty."

Adams library will purchase 25 personal computers and two laser

Mary Juskalian, of Mt. Pleasant Ave., is Rhode Island College's quintessential "good neighbor." She did not attend RIC (She has degrees from Rhode Island School of Design and Columbia University), and until recently, when her grand-nephew graduated, none of her relatives were connected to the College. But in 1983, because she "was in the neighborhood," Mary took an interest in RIC. She has been a member of the RIC Foundation for 13 years (and is currently its secretary), to which she has donated countless hours working on committees, stuffing envelopes, decorating for special events (She is a former art teacher), and cooking. (Her biscotti are to die for). She says: "I feel strongly about higher education. Whatever I can do to help fulfill the mission of RIC gives me great satisfaction."

Devoted teacher memorialized by endowed scholarship

by Cynthia L. Sousa

As U.S. historian Henry B. Adams once said, "A teacher affects eternity; he can never tell where his influence stops."

Adams would have liked Juliet (Acciardo) Romano, Rhode Island College Class of 1964.

Juliet, or Julie, as family and friends called her, was the epitome of Adams' description of a teacher. Her influence touched thousands of children, igniting an enthusiasm in them for knowledge.

Ruth Whipple, assistant professor emerita, agrees. Whipple and Julie were both teachers at the Henry Barnard School (HBS) when Julie was starting her career.

"Julie loved people, loved children and had a cheerful, lively approach to life that spread throughout the classroom," she remembers. "She was vivacious, a great teacher."

Julie, a Greenville resident who passed away on Sept. 15 at the age of 54, was an exceptional person, mother, wife, business woman and teacher. Some who knew her described her as "gifted" with an energetic personality and "an insurmountable love for children and learning."

She provided exceptional service in the field of early childhood education, both in the private sector through a

The Way We Were...

This popular item in What's News will continue this year in order for you to be able to revisit your alma mater with a selection of photos from the past — the College's past, whether the current era (Rhode Island College) or past eras (Rhode Island College of Education or Rhode Island State Normal School). We invite your contribution of old photos, along with sufficient information about each such as who's in the photo and what they are doing, the year it was taken and place (if possible). In the meantime, we'll continue searching our files for interesting pictures of past College life.

HEEDING THE TRUMPET'S CALL: The above photo from our files, taken by a Providence Journal photographer in 1958, shows "R.I.C.E. graduates" Elizabeth Smith and Robert Berlam running past a trumpeter and, we may assume, toward commencement exercises in front of the College building in downtown Providence. Rhode Island teachers and students share in a 'Marco Polo style' learning expedition

This past summer the Rhode Island Geography Education Alliance sent three teacher consultants, along with Rhode Island College professor and alliance coordinator, Anne Petry, to participate in a four-week program call Project Marco Polo, sponsored by the National Geographic Society and the Office of the Oceanographer of the Navy. The Teacher Consultants that participated were: Marilyn Malone and her student Cate Oswald from Barrington, Bethany Marchetti and her student Dana Borrelli from Smithfield and Maureen Spaight and her student William Fontes from East Providence. This Rhode Island team along with teams from Illinois and Colorado, were selected by the National Geographic Society to attend this year's expedition.

Project Marco Polo is a program which encompasses a plan that puts students and teachers aboard the Navy's Oceanographic Research ships working overseas. The ship makes a number of port calls, and -- like Marco Polo in the 12th century -- students and teachers bring home to their peers knowledge of foreign lands and oceans. Along the way, they learn that geography and science too, can be one of life's adventures -- that they should excite a student's curiosity. Each year Project Marco Polo offers a variety of opportunities for students and teachers to learn about the oceans, world cultures, geography, and global environment through multi-disciplinary study. The program attempts not only to expose students and teachers to hands-on learning activities, but also helps them to plan to use these activities in their respective classrooms and communities.

Project Marco Polo 1996 took the student/teacher teams from Rhode Island to Italy, Tunisia and Greece. Along the way, the teams gathered oceanographic knowledge of the Mediterranean Sea, Ionian Sea and Aegean Sea, explored the physical geography of the visited countries and observed and studied the various cultural aspects of these countries.

The program began July 15 in Rome where participants studied the ancient ruins of the city before traveling to Naples to board the Navy Research Ship USNS Wyman. Once in the Medieval city of Naples, the group toured the City of Pompeii and climbed Mt. Vesuvius. From Naples, the group sailed to the toe of Italy's boot, Vibo, where in a small mountain village called Moterroso, the residents welcomed them with a day of festivities and celebration "Italian Style," and then on to Sicily and Tunisia via the Strait of Messina.

While in Tunisia, the group visited the ancient cities of Carthage, Sidi Bou Said, Kairouan (the crossroads of the ancient caravan trade routes, souks and the Grand Mosque) and Dougga. The group also got to spend a Sunday morning in the Sahara, riding camels through the world's largest desert.

After spending four days in Tunisia, the group spent the next five days at sea. This is when the bulk of the oceanographic research was conducted. The student/teacher teams worked with naval oceanographers, biologists, chemists and meteorologists to study navigational charts, conduct plankton tows, study the various plant and animal life of the sea, and collect core samples from the bottom of the Mediterranean.

The students also launched their own weather balloons for purposes of gathering atmospheric weather data. Everyone aboard the ship did research, collected data and took classes and kept daily journals. All of the data collected was officially logged and will be used for the Navy's research purposes.

Upon conclusion of the trip, the group sailed to Souda Bay in Crete on Aug. 5 and visited the ruins of the Minoan Palace of Knossos, and then on to the City of Athens where they toured the Acropolis and Olympic stadium. And timely enough, the group happened to be at the Olympic stadium the day after the Greek Olympic athletes came home to share their Olympic game winnings!

Project Marco Polo proved to be a once in a lifetime opportunity for all those involved, especially the students, says Petry. The students that participated in the program were evaluated by their teachers and then recommended for the program. The students were required to submit a series of essays to the National Geographic Society explaining why they would be good candidates for the program. All students were former students of the teacher consultants.

"An opportunity like Project Marco Polo epitomizes the ultimate learning environment, where you have students and teachers participating in real life, hands-on activities and sharing in these experiences. The students and teachers never considered themselves as tourists. Tourists are silent observers, but explorers use all of their senses to immerse themselves in the culture, says Petry.

As part of the Rhode Island Geography Education Alliance, the student/teacher teams will now provide students and teachers throughout Rhode Island with further oceanographic knowledge of the world's oceans and the physical geography of various countries and their impact on the cultural development of these countries. Anyone interested in any further information on this program may contact the alliance office at 456-8069.

In other alliance news, Spaight, who teaches at Martin Junior High School in East Providence, received a $750 scholarship from the National Council for Geographic Education (NCGE) and the George F. Cram Company. The funds are to be used to attend the NCGE annual meeting in Santa Barbara, Calif., this month.

A world of possibilities —

Alumna Patricia Tondreau is strong advocate for women in business

by George LaTour
What's News Associate Editor

An award-winning woman business owner finds the hurly-burly world of business "challenging and stimulating" and has come to believe that women can readily adapt to its demands.

Patricia A. (Martin) Tondreau of Lincoln, a graduate of Rhode Island College, Class of 1963, is president of Creative Print Management, Inc., in North Providence, which is a recent consolidation of her Creative Forms & Systems, Inc. and Office 2000, Inc., both of which she served as president and chief executive officer.

Having been a wife and mother and all that that entails, while being a loving daughter tending to the needs of a mother dying of cancer, she felt many of the pressures to which women are heir apparent.

Add to that her former roles of school teacher, social worker, project coordinator for Opportunities for Women, Inc. and an active civic life, including serving at present as a trustee on the RIC Foundation, and you have an environment which fosters use of one's creative abilities — sometimes just to cope.

"I believe that's why a lot of women go into business. They're used to many roles," says Tondreau.

Conversely, she finds that having been in business for herself "has helped me manage my own life better. It has helped me become more flexible."

"Women's issues," she assures, "has been one of my passions."

She was a member of the Rhode Island Minority Business Enterprises Commission from 1989 to 1992, and was recently named co-chair of the Providence Chamber of Commerce's Women in Business Council, which is aimed at addressing the "real concerns facing women in the workplace."

For instance, it wants to know how significant are the "Mommy Track" and "Glass Ceiling" in the business world. Tondreau sees her role as that of providing aid to women in growing businesses.

It's the key

Tondreau strongly believes that "no one's successful in and by themselves" and she credits the mentor she had and says "it's the key we give back to help others."

She says she's "had a lot of help" from her family "from my grandmother on down" and feels that "everybody needs that. You can't feel isolated and succeed."

"That's why the Providence Chamber of Commerce mentoring program is very important to me."

Her family is comprised of husband, Emery, and three grown children, Karen, Kevin and Pamela, and two grandchildren, Taylor Ann and "Baby X," she says with a chuckle, born on Halloween and, at the time of the interview, unnamed. The baby boy was soon named Jakob Emery, reports a proud grandmother.

Tondreau has had her own business for the past 15 years, having been located in Warwick where she shared space with two other firms before relocating to the North Providence site in September.

Her business has evolved from the founding of Creative Forms & Systems in 1982 when it designed and sold computer forms for companies installing new software systems.

"It worked into design and sales of brochures — all kinds of print materials needed by business" and then went to laser printing and direct mail. "We had the first laser-printing data-service center in the state" in 1985 when the business became Office 2000.

The firm handled a multitude of business needs, including statement rendering for a credit union and auto registration renewals for the state.

"I showed them (Department of Motor Vehicles) how to do it in a less cumbersome way and reduce their costs," says Tondreau, adding, "I'm always interested in learning new technology and seeing how it fits in a company."

A further transition

In the past three or four years, her firm has made a further transition to print management, working with various manufacturers — "I had formed partnerships with business long before 'partnering' became the buzz word" — to provide companies with letterheads, promotional products, mailing lists and the like — all "helping to cut corners."

She introduced an innovative mail-return envelope to the RIC Alumni Affairs office for use in its mail solicitation program. It saved from having to insert a return envelope, making the process more efficient and less costly.

When approached by a business for advice and help, Tondreau asks, "What do you want to do? What do you want to accomplish? How best can I make this more efficient for you? Then we look at what they're doing and come in with suggestions."

Referring to the concept of "partnering," Tondreau says that "in the 90s and beyond, this is the way we'll do business (working hand-in-glove with suppliers, banks, etc.). You can't do all things alone for all people."

Because of her many business associations both on the local and national level, she feels she knows "where I can get things done" and doesn't hesitate to do them for a client.

Some of the "secrets" of her success seem to be her willingness to extend a more personal approach to her customers, all of whom she feels are unique in their own ways, and to be flexible in dealing with them.

She maintains file notes on the needs of individual businesses, which over time creates trust that she knows their problems and needs and is intent upon helping them achieve success.

Award winner

Tondreau was just named "Small Business Leader of the Year" by the Greater Providence Chamber of Commerce at its 129th annual meeting Nov. 25 in the Westin Hotel.

Awarded for her activism in the community, it is something of which she is "very, very proud."

Last year, Tondreau won recognition through receipt of the Athena Award for her role as a women business owner. The internationally recognized award is made annually by the YWCA and Chamber of Commerce in states throughout the country.

Although highly gratified by the Yale prof to speak on labor unions

"What Can Active Unionists Learn from the Past?" will be the topic of David Montgomery, professor of labor history at Yale University, Tuesday, Jan. 28, at 7 p.m. at the Institute of Labor Studies, 99 Bald Hill Road, Cranston.

The talk will highlight the first night of the Rhode Island College Labor History course 201 by Robert Cvornyek.

Montgomery is widely recognized as the leading labor historian in the country. A former factory worker and union activist, he led a generation of labor historians to examine the role of worker struggles on the shop floor in response to changes in technology and work processes.

He also pioneered in the study of race relations in economic and political history.

His talk is free and open to the public.

The program is being sponsored by the Institute for Labor Studies, the Rhode Island Labor History Society and the RIC Labor Studies Program. For more information or directions, call 463-9900.

award itself, Tondreau was less than thrilled with the media coverage it earned here in her home state of Rhode Island.

"Nothing. Absolutely nothing about my winning the award was in the media," she says, which seems to support the findings of the national organization, Women, Men and Media, that women are under-represented in the media.

Her interviewer surmised that had she gotten into an accident on the way to pick-up the award, the accident would have made the news.

Tondreau laughed heartily and said she had to agree.

As a result of her winning that prestigious award, she now sits on a panel which will judge the New England women business owner of the year.

"After I won the award, I said to myself: 'Now what are you going to do?'" confesses Tondreau.

She pauses briefly before answering her own question: "I'm beginning to think about phasing out of business in, say, five years and will do something else."

She does paint and would like to "get more into the art world," she says, while seemingly scanning her own mind for other possibilities.

"I really feel that Rhode Island College — which was the only real affordable education I could have had — opened the world to me."

For Patricia Tondreau, there seems yet a world of possibilities.

John Fuzek says he needs five hands —

Alumnus produces, performs on holiday album

by George LaTour
What's News Associate Editor

John W. Fuzek of Harmony, Rhode Island College Classes of 1990 and 95, dropped into his seat while letting out a sigh.

It was, perhaps, the first time he had stopped all day and that day was just another in a seemingly endless succession of hectic days of late in his life.

Fuzek is a singer, songwriter, guitarist, organizer and promoter and, to support all this music-based activity, a graphic designer. He's also a photographer and has taught the subject at Providence's Learning Connection.

His latest venture is a new holiday album, "the 12 Steps of Christmas and Other Holiday Fare" which includes his song, "It Won't be Christmas," among 19 others from local, regional and international artists.

"I do a little bit of everything," he explains, "but I'm primarily a musician, although I've been low-key in that area with all the promoting going on."

In addition to his holiday CD, Fuzek has been the originator and producer of the Hear-in-Rhode Island festival for the past three years. The two-day affair in early summer is a showcase of music by Rhode Island artists. The last one offered Rhode Island music lovers 88 acts featuring all kinds of music.

"It's a big free festival at Water Place Park," says Fuzek, who estimates that some 5,000 people attended last June.

"The whole thing gets done on donations," he says by way of holiday CD. And, if not, well, he'll probably have to fall back on his free-lance graphic design work, an area in which he excelled as a masters degree candidate at RIC where he was an assistant in the Graphics Department.

He also had earned a RIC Talent Award for three years in a row for photography while an undergraduate. He had studied graphic arts and photography at RIC and, before that, at the Community College of Rhode Island where he earned an associates degree in fine arts prior to his earning his RIC degrees.

The holiday CD is recorded on an independent label — Providence Music Works — and includes among the performers one from England, one from Newfoundland, Canada, and several from the Boston area as well as the local artists.

Songs include "The Christmas Goose," "Menorah" and "Winter Solstice Blessing."

It can be found in smaller independent record stores or through mail order on the Web Site.

Fuzek has been writing songs and playing guitar for the past 21 years. His music, he says, "deals with my views of life and issues which I am sensitive to" and is presented with a rock/pop/folk-based acoustic sound.

He is a son of Tony and Dianne Fuzek of Greenville and has a younger sister and brother.

He's been performing around the Northeast for the past dozen years and is half of the Fuzek-Rossoni Duo. They have performed before live audiences as well as on radio and television. The other half of the duo is Mary Ann Rossoni. Both sing and play guitar.

They have two recordings to their credit to date: "Living with the Fury and the Fire" and "Waking Up from the American Dream." And they contributed to the compilations for First Night 1992 and 1994. The duo has won or been nominated for several Rhode Island music awards. Fuzek was voted Best Male Vocalist twice in the Providence Phoenix's Best Music Poll.

As chairman of the Rhode Island Songwriters Association, he has been instrumental in gaining recognition for the group through workshops, showcases and festivals, the Hear-in-Rhode Island festival being a "spin-off" activity of the association.

"There's a feeling that, if it's local, and not on the radio every day, then it can't be good," Fuzek told a Providence Journal-Bulletin Lifebeat reporter recently in regard to the Hear-in-Rhode Island festival.

"We're trying to dispel that myth. There's a deep, deep well of talent right here.

"One of my goals," adds Fuzek, "is to try and get Rhode Island recognized musically."

To accomplish this, "I'm usually doing about five things at once," he admits, adding: "I just need five hands."

JOHN FUZEK

explaining that it's not a money-maker.

"Music is a tough field. That's why I have graphic arts as a back-up."

He hopes he'll clear at least enough to cover expenses with the

Students benefit from alum's NCGE award

Class of 1981 alumna Maureen W. Spaight, of Rumford, received a $750 scholarship from the National Council for Geographic Education (NCGE) and the George F. Cram Company.

The scholarship allowed Spaight, a teacher at Martin Junior High School in East Providence, to attend the NCGE annual meeting recently held in Santa Barbara, Calif.

Spaight presented lessons at the meeting and was honored at the awards banquet.

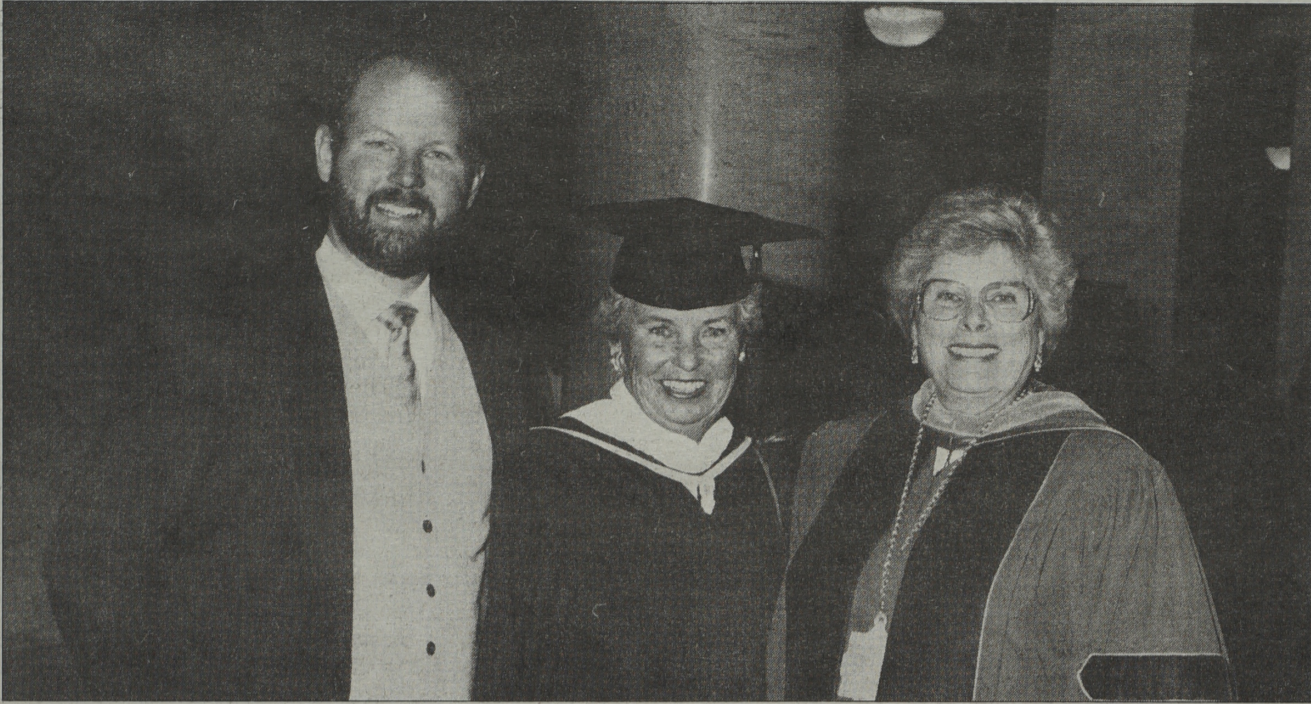

According to a NCGE press release, Spaight was chosen for "her innovative and original approaches to teaching and her reflection of current trends in geography."

To be considered for the award, Spaight submitted a paper entitled "Faces of a Nation." The unit focuses on the United States' immigrant past. Using a packet of old photographs and tin-types, each student "adopts" an individual picture and develops a character built around it. Connections are made to the geography of the host land and its similarities to the homeland.

As a culmination of this unit, students will visit Ellis Island and the Statue of Liberty with funding from National Geographic.

This is the third consecutive year Spaight has earned an award from NCGE.

RIC represented well in Utah by 1950 alumna

by Cynthia L. Sousa
What's News Writer

The calendar of a college president can be very demanding. When Rhode Island College President John Nazarian received an invitation to the inauguration of Peggy A. Stock as Westminster College's fifteenth president on Oct. 19 in Utah, he had to decline.

You see, taking a trip to Salt Lake City just wasn't something he could fit into his schedule at the time.

The invitation carried the provision that "if you cannot attend, perhaps your institution could be represented by some other colleague or alumnus."

After the development office checked to see if there were any RIC graduates living in Salt Lake City, Marguerite Brown, director of development, identified Jacqueline Morgan, Class of 1950. Once contacted, Morgan said she would be glad to represent RIC at the inauguration. In fact, her son was an alumnus of Westminster College (Class of 1983) so the event would hold double meaning for her.

Morgan spoke to staff members of Westminster's communications office and inaugural committee, received all the details of the events leading to the big day, rented her academic regalia and received directions to the Rotunda of the State Capitol Building.

As a delegate representing RIC, Morgan was invited to attend all the presidential inauguration activities at no cost. There were dinners, lectures, exhibits, receptions, an Oktoberfest celebration, a theater production, and an inaugural ball and the inaugural ceremony itself.

At the ceremony, delegates of universities and colleges dressed in academic regalia, were lined up for procession in order of the year their respective institution was founded.

With RIC being founded in 1854, Morgan figured she would be close to the beginning of the line. However, Harvard University was first with a founding date of 1636. Morgan and RIC were 35th with at least 50 other delegates behind her.

Morgan and her son attended the ceremony, and in a letter to Brown, called it "glorious." They even had their picture taken with the new president.

"Thanks so much for inviting me—I was very proud to be there," Morgan wrote.

Residential life and housing director receives national recognition

Cherie Withrow, director of residential life and housing at Rhode Island College, recently received the 1996 National Association of Student Personnel Administrators (NASPA) Region I Continuous Service Award.

CHERIE WITHROW

Service Award.

Gary Penfield, vice president for student affairs, has worked with Withrow for over 18 years and nominated her for the award. Penfield, in his nominating letter, cites Withrow's numerous significant contributions to the quality of life on the RIC campus and her contributions to the regional NASPA organization.

She has served as a member of the Career Development and Professional Standards Committee; as the Rhode Island State Chairperson and through this assignment, as a member of the NASPA Regional Executive Committee; she has served as a member of the Small College Professional Network; and assisted in various ways in the work of Regional Conference Planning Committee.

According to Penfield, Withrow "cares deeply about the NASPA organization, the role that NASPA plays in support of our profession, and the particular emphasis and support that NASPA places on young professionals."

Kristen King Salemi, director of student activities, also nominated Withrow for the award. Her letter also supports Withrow's continuous contributions to NASPA Region I over the years.

"Cherie has been a loyal member, supporter and volunteer of NASPA Region I for many years. She works hard and believes in what she does. She promotes the NASPA and the Student Affairs profession to new professionals. She is dedicated and caring."

Withrow, who colleagues describe as self-effacing, was "delighted" to receive the award at the recent NASPA Region I conference in Springfield, Mass.

In addition, King, who also attended the conference, presented a program entitled, "Mid-Level Professionals at the Crossroads: A Rap Session." The program provided an informal discussion for mid-level professionals to talk about issues that are unique to them such as new parenting, marriage, time management, career goals, children, home owning, etc.

Troy Williams, Sweet Hall director, received the Richard F. Stevens Outstanding New Professional Scholarship from NASPA and was honored at the conference awards banquet.

Williams received the award for his significant contributions as a new professional to the Student Personnel profession and to RIC.

Chemistry alumnus named 'University Professor' at U. of San Diego

Mitchell R. Malachowski, a graduate in chemistry of Rhode Island College, Class of 1977, and now professor of chemistry at the University of San Diego (USD), has been named "University Professor — Project Based" at the university for research which fosters scholarly achievement and the university's mission and goals.

Having earned his Ph.D. in organic chemistry from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill in 1983, he joined the USD faculty in 1984.

With funding from the Petroleum Research Fund, the Research Corporation and American Chemical Society grants, he maintains an active research program involving the preparation of artificial enzymes which contain copper and manganese.

During his time at USD, he has published 27 papers, given 42 presentations at professional meetings, supervised 41 research students and has included high school teachers and students in his research as part of his commitment to enhancing pre-college science education.

He has served as associate dean of the College of Arts and Sciences and chair of the Academic Assembly.

He has received recognition for his teaching excellence from the University of North Carolina and was the 1990 Charles B. Willard Achievement Award winner for distinguished work by an alumnus at RIC.

RIC alumnus named Conn. Prof of Year

A 1971 masters degree recipient at Rhode Island College has been named the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching "Professor of the Year" for the state of Connecticut, it was announced by the Council for Advancement and Support of Education (CASE).

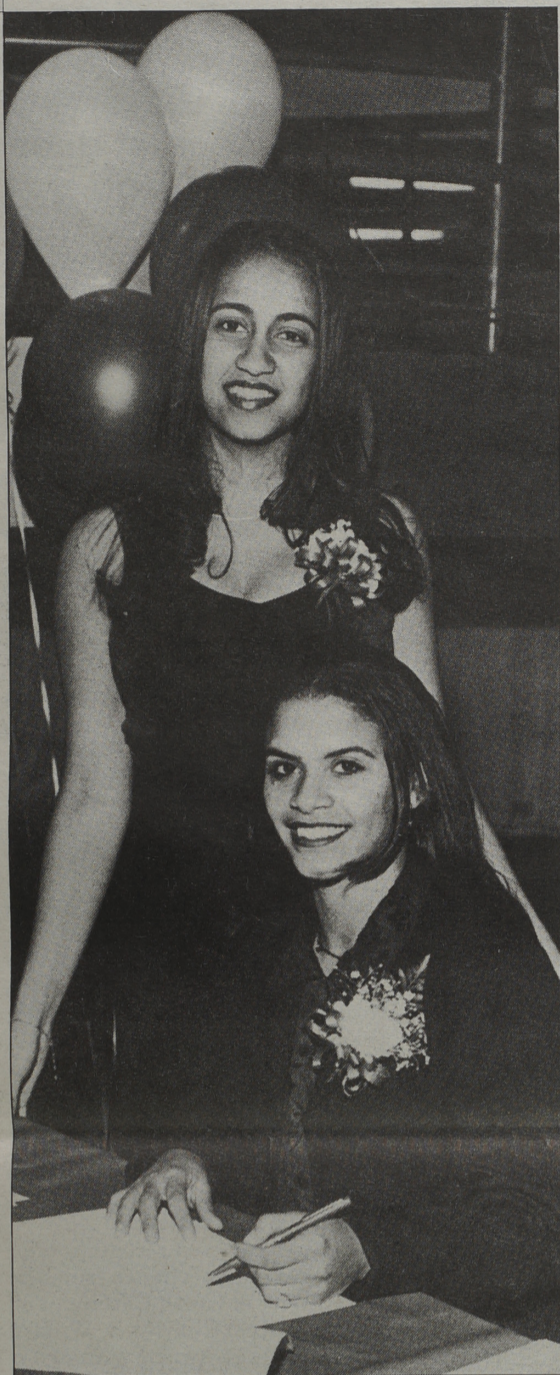

John M. Roderick, a professor of English and communications at the University of Hartford, was cited as a "noted and frequently published poet" who hopes to engender in his students a love of writing as a useful form of self expression.

He has worked with the University of Hartford to integrate writing courses into all areas of the curriculum and created a distance-learning course for companies that want to evaluate and develop their employees' corporate communications skills.

Roderick also edits the student literary publication Expressions.

Roderick received his bachelors degree from Providence College in 1967 and his Ph.D. from Brown University in 1974. He resides in Hartford with his wife, Roseann, who holds bachelors (Class of 1966) and masters degrees from RIC.

Upward Bound celebrates 30 years

GREETERS: Jandira Ramos (standing), Class of 1995, and now a student at Brown University, and Elisy Isabel Blanco, Class of 1994, and now at Providence College, welcome arriving guests.

With the theme of "A Generation of Hope and Achievement," the Rhode Island College Upward Bound program celebrated its 30th anniversary on Saturday, Nov. 16.

Approximately 300 people, including current students, teachers, high school counselors and principals, alumni and their families, and past and current administrators of the program gathered in Donovan Dining Center to recount the past successes of the program and to look forward to a bright future.

Here are just a few of the many smiling faces in attendance.

printers with the $37,000 Champlin Foundations grant, according to Richard Olsen, director.

"This is very timely," he said of the award. "The new equipment will make a major difference in our students' ability to work within the new environment of the World Wide Web."

Students will not be the only beneficiaries, according to statistics kept by the library. Of the registered borrowers at the library, 2,177 are people from the community who are not affiliated with any of the institutions affiliated with the Higher Education Library Information Network (HELIN). In addition, the library provides reference service, including electronic access to information to anyone who enters RIC's library which nearly reached the 300,000 mark during the 1995-1996 fiscal year.

The Ocean State Charities Trust gift of $5,400 will be used to purchase 11 science kits for the K.I.T.E.S. Project, as well as start-up funds for a Materials Resource Center, according to Project co-principal investigator and RIC Associate Professor MacGregor Kniseley.

Kniseley and Gerald Kowalczyk, executive director of the East Bay Educational Collaborative, head the partnership, which includes the state department of education, the business sector, and the National Science Foundation (NSF), which awarded $1.8 million in 1995 to begin the K.I.T.E.S. Project.

K.I.T.E.S. stands for Kits in Teaching Elementary Science. The Project is intended to replace the textbook-based science programs in elementary classrooms with an innovative and integrated kit-based science curriculum. "It will ultimately break the pattern of our elementary teachers avoiding the teaching of science or relying solely on textbooks for instruction," according to the NSF grant proposal.

The "kits" are actually 30-gallon storage totes filled with materials for hands-on, inquiry-based science. Some of the kit topics are the life cycle of butterflies, food chemistry, floating and sinking, measuring time, magnets and motors and microworlds. Each kit is grade-level appropriate, with instructional materials for teachers.

"The purchase of these 11 kits enables more than 33 K-6 grade teachers from the eight East Bay communities to provide over 825 students opportunities to engage in hands-on, inquiry-centered science," according to Kniseley. "The contribution brings the project a step closer to achieving the goals of bringing motivating instructional materials to all K-6 grade children in the 52 cooperative East Bay schools and 60,000 hours of professional development to 600 K-6 teachers."

chain of preschools she founded and operated, and as an adjunct professor at HBS.

"Julie was indeed a very special person. She molded a lot of lives," said her husband.

Now, as a special tribute to Julie, an endowed scholarship fund is being established in honor and recognition of her devotion to education.

Julie founded the Greenville Nursery School in 1975 after teaching at the Sowams School in Barrington and at HBS. The mother of four children, she founded the school when her daughter reached preschool age.

In the school's infancy, Julie and her husband, Michael (Class of 1964), traveled to England, Italy, and Hawaii to observe some of the most reputable and non-traditional teaching programs, including the Montessori schools.

"She took what she perceived to be the best parts of each program and created her own," said Michael. Her curriculum was considered by many as a model and was very popular. "The children at the schools thrived," said Michael.

By 1983, she had two other schools—one in Barrington, her hometown, called The East Bay Early Childhood Center, and another in Providence, her husband's hometown, called The Child Enrichment Center. "She made a concerted effort to bring her program to the communities that we grew up in," said Michael.

Laura Zucker, Class of 1976, was Julie's assistant and head teacher at the Greenville Nursery since its founding. "She was both a mentor and a dear friend," she said fondly. "She was an inspiration to all those who came in contact with her. She possessed a magnetic personality, full of endless energy and was devoted and passionate about cultivating the minds of young children."

Zucker went on to say that, "All those who knew Julie were blessed by the contagious spirit and love that she possessed."

Strongly believing that the preschool years are the "vital years" in a child's development, it was Julie's desire to design a "child-centered program."

Her schools and programs provided and continue to provide a "stimulating and creative environment for a community of young children to experience, explore, develop, and establish a foundation for future living and learning." The children learned through hands-on experimentation and through the joy of discovery in areas such as art, music, science, and drama.

At any given time, the schools service as many as 500 children from 18-months-old to 6-years-old and employ up to 28 certified teachers and skilled assistants combined.

By all accounts, Julie dedicated herself to providing thousands of children with an enrichment experience that awakened in them a desire and curiosity for learning.

Michael is also an educator. He taught at Lincoln High School for two years, left to work in private industry, only to return to teaching at the Esek Hopkins Middle School in Providence in 1990. Education is very important to the Romano family.

Michael and Julie's three oldest children attended HBS and have gone on to successful careers after completing college. Kevin, their youngest son, attends the University of Texas at Austin.

The Juliet A. Romano Endowed Scholarship Fund for Early Childhood Education is being established in the RIC Foundation. This scholarship will assist RIC students who best exemplify Julie's admirable qualities.

Recipients will be Rhode Island residents, full-time early childhood education majors, with demonstrated merit and need. The RIC Foundation will award the annual interest accrued to the fund, thereby ensuring that this tribute to Julie exists in perpetuity. The scholarship will be presented for the first time when the endowment reaches a minimum of $5,000.

If you are interested in helping to establish this scholarship in honoring Julie's memory, you may do so by sending your contribution to: The Juliet A. Romano Endowed Scholarship Fund, Rhode Island College Foundation, 600 Mt. Pleasant Ave., Providence, RI 02908. (Checks should be made out to the RIC Foundation and carry the notation that they support the Juliet A. Romano Endowed Scholarship. (All gifts are tax deductible to the extent allowed by law.)

Through this endowed scholarship, Juliet's family and friends can perpetuate her spirit and dedication to young people through the coming generations of teachers.

DONALD E. TENCHER

director of intercollegiate athletics, intramurals and recreation

Dear Santa:

I hope this letter is finding you and Mrs. Claus, as well as Rudolph and the gang in good health. The years just fly by as I mark my second Christmas at Rhode Island College. I am thankful for so many positive accomplishments by our department during the past year and extremely hopeful for the future.

The new mall really highlights the middle of the campus and creates a beautiful gateway to the "New Building" but Santa we really could use a name for this great facility. While you are looking for a name could you make sure the construction problems that are still remaining are fixed before the dedication. Anything you could do would be greatly appreciated. We are also thankful to the citizens of Rhode Island for supporting the recent bond referenda. The performing arts building is badly needed and it will be so nice to have a telephone system that doesn't go out of commission a dozen times a year. Additionally, the new tennis facility we asked for last year looks great and the track resurfacing is scheduled for the spring. Thanks to Student Community Government Inc., construction of the dugouts we so desperately needed for baseball and softball should become a reality before you take off on your annual sleigh ride. The Rec Center is busier than ever with intramural and recreation programs. The completion of Phase II would be great and a new surface for the main floor is needed.

We really appreciate the job our student-athletes do for us day in and day out while representing their College. In order to assist in the retention process of these young leaders we could really use some additional resources in order to put an academic support program together. Additionally, a few more budget dollars would be appreciated. Currently, we are the lowest budgeted program in our conference and at times it is awful difficult to compete. We will continue to work hard at fundraising but a couple of extra bucks thrown our way in the budget would really be helpful.

As appreciative as I am for the new facilities, the extra fundraising dollars and our student-athletes I am equally appreciative for the great people who have come into my life at RIC and have been so very supportive. First, my management team, support staff and coaches have been really hustling and hopefully you can give them a few extra gifts this Christmas because they really deserve it. The support from the administration here at RIC, starting with President Nazarian and including Vice-Presidents Penfield, DeLucia and Salesses, has been nothing less than outstanding. All of the College departments, the faculty and staff, have gone way beyond what is required as they are called on to assist us on a daily basis. A student body that has been great and alumni who have been nothing less than exceptional.

Thanks again, have a safe trip and please take care of all these special people who make up the Rhode Island College family.

Sincerely,

Don Tencher

Service Recognition Days

In order to recognize the commitment and dedicated service of its faculty and staff, Rhode Island college established a Service Recognition Day. On this ninth Service Recognition Day held on Dec. 4, those who have served the College for 10, 15, 20, or 25 years were recognized at a reception at the President's House.

A 30-Year Honor recognizes faculty, administrative staff, and support staff who have completed 30 years of service to Rhode Island College. The Honor Roll is permanently displayed in the President's Office reception area in Roberts Hall. Honor Roll member attended a reception Dec. 5 at the President's House.

Rhode Island College values and appreciates the members of its faculty and staff whose loyalty and dedication have contributed meaningfully to the College's growth and success over the years!

Stillman/Pell Award

cited for achievement over a sustained period of time, her service to her field and her commitment to the ideals of Senator Pell as embodied in the mission and service of the National Endowment for the Arts.

The awards presentation will be an occasion for a national and local tribute to former U.S. Sen. Claiborne Pell (D-R.I.), who recently retired from office after 36 years of service in Washington and a lifetime of commitment to supporting the arts.

"The annual Pell Awards, recognizing artists of national significance, is a fitting tribute and a token of our appreciation of all of the senator's accomplishments," noted Mandle.

In addition to the five Rhode Island winners of the award, actor Jason Robards will be awarded the Pell Award for Lifetime Achievement. Robards, who has had a long and distinguished career in the theater and in movies, performed at Trinity in 1993 in Hughie.

Public announcement of the awards Nov. 21 was made by Trinity Repertory Company and co-chairs Suzanne and Terrence Murray and Clare and Vartan Gregorian.

Other winners are poet Michael Harper, Dorothy Jungels, founder and artistic director of the Everett Dance Theatre, sculptor Howard Ben Tre and sculptor and illustrator Chris Van Allsburg.

Among the theater luminaries Trinity says will attend the event, which will include dramatic and musical performances, are director Jose Quintoro, playwright Tony Kushner and actress JoBeth Williams, a one-time performer with Trinity Rep.

Stillman, a native New Yorker, began playing piano at age 3. She simultaneously earned both bachelors and masters degrees in 1977 from The Juilliard School where she was the youngest ever admitted to its doctoral program.

A concert pianist who has performed to acclaim in Europe, Israel and the United States, she joined the RIC music faculty in 1980.

As artist-in-residence and professor of music, she both teaches and performs at RIC where she won the Paul Maixner Award for Distinguished Teaching in 1988 and the Thorp Award for Scholarly and Creative Excellence in 1990.

Her awards, recognitions and list of outstanding performances both on radio and TV and in concert halls fills many type-written pages.

In 1993, she joined musical forces with famed trumpeter Wynton Marsalis when they recorded a CD from Sony Classical entitled On the 20th Century which soon made it on the Billboard music charts. The San Francisco Examiner termed Stillman and Marsalis "an impeccable duo."

Stillman reports that she and Marsalis now plan to do a second album.

'Earth Angels: Migrant Children in America' exhibit at several sites at RIC until Dec. 20

by George LaTour
What's News Associate Editor

An exhibition of 41 color photographs that serves as a compelling reminder of migrant farm work and of the men, women and children whose daily hardships put food on our tables is underway at several sites at Rhode Island College until Dec. 20.

Photographs will be on exhibit in Adams Library, Roberts Hall lobby and/or Alumni Lounge and the Unity Center. The exhibition is free and open to the public.

Produced and photographed by Nancy Buirski, foreign picture editor of The New York Times, the exhibition tells a complex and revealing story of the plight of Mexican-American migrant farm-worker children.

They are children caught in a life of poverty and back-breaking work whose moves from place to place leave them lacking in self-confidence and lagging behind in school.

At sunrise, many can be found in the fields, where they are exposed to dangerous pesticides as they work. At day's end, exhausted, they go home to substandard shacks.

The children in these photographs are heroic and not easily forgotten, says Buirski.

Her elegant and interpretive photographs reveal the private realities as well as the social realities of these unchampioned children.

Earth Angels focuses on migrant children in California, Florida, New York, Texas and Washington affected by the adversities of migrant life, yet maintaining a spirit that transcends their difficult childhood.

In 1967 Robert Coles, the well-known child psychologist and political activist, wrote about the "psychological pressures of growing up in the cycle of migrant farm work."

WORKING THE FIELDS from sun-up to sun-down is the Zavala family in Homestead, Fla.

"How literally extraordinary, and in fact how extraordinarily cruel, their lives are," he said, citing "the constant mobility, the leave-takings and the extreme hardship that goes with a meager (at best) income, the need always to gird oneself for the next slur, the next sharp rebuke, except, naturally, for the work that has to be done in the fields.

"There is...the misery; and it cannot be denied its importance, because not only bodies but minds suffer out of hunger and untreated illness."

Nearly three decades later, these same problems and challenges remain: a 1993 study reported that migrant farm-worker life still consists mainly of "poverty, hard manual labor, unsanitary living conditions, lack of medical insurance or access to care facilities, high rates of illness, early death, economic uncertainty, and personal humiliation."

The exhibition is touring the United States under the auspices of Exhibit Touring Services, a program in the College of Letters, Arts and Social Sciences at Eastern Washington University. It began at RIC Dec. 2 and is part of the Dialogue in Diversity Project and ties into the recent College-wide October Series, "Children in the Streets."

Dean Richard R. Weiner of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences reports that the photographer, Nancy Buirski, will come to RIC in the spring to give a related lecture which will be accompanied by several other events sponsored by the Faculty of Arts and Sciences and the Department of Anthropology and Geography.

The department is dedicating 1996-97 to the issues of migration, says Weiner.

RIC singers to perform at First Nights

The thousands who flock to downtown Providence and Fall River on New Year's Eve will have plenty of opportunities to hear Rhode Island College performers lend their voices to the festivities.

RIC students Karen Balgord, Eva Kendrick and Magen Slesinger are members of an a capella quartet, Mademoiselle, which appeared at RIC's Collage Concert in the spring. They perform works ranging from medieval to popular music. At First Night they will perform in the Rhode Island Hospital Trust Tower lobby at 8 and 9 p.m.

RIC faculty members Joanne Mouradjian and Donald St. Jean will be appearing at First Night for the fifth year with their group, Good Friends, an upbeat vocal quintet specializing in Broadway, pop, jazz, swing and five-part tight harmony arrangements. They will be at the Providence Public Library theater at 8 and 9 p.m.

Adjunct faculty Georgette Ross Hutchins and Rene de la Garza team up with alumna Cecelia Schiano Rodi in the operatic quartet Operartisti. At First Night they will debut with the Rhode Island Philharmonic Orchestra in an arias program that includes music from Die Fledermaus and The Barber of Seville in Veterans Memorial Auditorium at 10 and 11 p.m.

Grad student David Price and Barbara Youmans, who has appeared as soloist with the RIC Chamber Singers and RIC College Chorus, will be part of a quartet presenting a variety of the most popular numbers from the Gilbert and Sullivan repertoire with the Ocean State Light Opera (OSLO), which will participate for the first time in Fall River's First Night celebration. The group will be at the First Baptist Church, 228 North Main St., Fall River, at 8:30, 9:30, and 10:30 p.m.

Pianist Rieko Aizawa in recital Dec. 11

Pianist Rieko Aizawa will perform pieces by Mozart, Ravel and Schumann in the 1 o'clock Chamber Music Series Wednesday, Dec. 11, in Rhode Island College's Roberts Recital Hall 138.

Born in Japan, she began piano lessons at age 5. By 1986, she was awarded First Prize in her division at the 40th All-Japan Student Music Competition. During the summer of 1988, she was an auditor at Vermont's renowned Marlboro Music Festival and returned as a full participant during the summers of 1989, 91, 92 and 93.

Also in 1988, she played with the Brandenburg Ensemble at the opening concerts of Tokyo's Casals Hall and made her U.S. debut in concerts at the Kennedy Center and Carnegie Hall.

She is a 1994 graduate of the Curtis Institute where she worked with Horszowski, Seymour Lipkin and Peter Serkin, and completed her masters degree at Juilliard. She now resides in Philadelphia.

The recital is free and open to the public. For more information, call John Pellegrino, series coordinator, at 456-8244.

Notice of Affirmative Action and Nondiscrimination

Rhode Island College is committed to equal opportunity and affirmative action. No student, employee, or applicant will be denied admission, employment, or access to programs and activities because of race, sex, religion, age, color, national origin, handicap/disability status, sexual orientation/preference, or veteran status. This College policy is in concert with state and federal nondiscrimination laws. Inquiries concerning the College's administration of the nondiscrimination laws should be addressed to the College director of affirmative action. Reasonable accommodation upon request.

Class Notes

Greetings! To the many alumni and friends of Rhode Island College whom I have not yet had a chance to meet personally, please allow me to introduce myself. My name is Ellie O'Neill, and since August I have had the distinct privilege of serving as Interim Director of Alumni Affairs.

I arrived during a time of transition for the Alumni Office. Holly Shadoian, (Class of 1973) longtime Director and friend to many of you moved across campus and is currently serving as Interim Director of Admissions. Cheryl Precopio, Class of 1991, joined the Alumni/Development Team in July as the Director of the Annual Fund. Although it has been a very hectic time, the support we have all received from the professional and support staff, Alumni Board, our students, and dedicated volunteers, had made for a very smooth adjustment.

Eleanor O'Neill
Interim Director of Alumni Affairs

We are very grateful to Clare Eckert and the staff of the news bureau for assisting us in bringing this special supplement of What's News to you. During the transition, it became apparent that RIC's alumni magazine, Perspectives, would not be published during this calendar year. We are using What's News as a one-time vehicle to bring you alumni news and notes that have accumulated during the change in personnel. We hope you enjoy the supplement and continue to send us news of the passages in your life.

My first few months on the job have been busy. I arrived on the heels of the Alumni Golf Tournament which raised a record amount this year to support the RICochet Fund. We have also been busy putting the finishing touches on the Alumni Directory, the first in ten years. In addition, as many of you know, we conducted a very active campaign to support the passage of bond referenda #2 and #3 which will have a dramatic impact on the College, as well as on all of higher education in the state. Together with the activities of the Annual Fund, phonathons, board activities, and planning for next year, we find ourselves already facing the holiday season.

And speaking of the holidays, we hope you all had a chance to review our first ever Holiday Merchandise flyer which appeared in the last issue of What's News. Together with Donald Tencher, director of athletics, and the What's News support staff, we are delighted to invite you to take advantage of ordering RIC alumni apparel, both now and in the future.

The months ahead offer opportunities for all our alumni to celebrate, and participate. Our NCAA Division III men and women's basketball teams will kick off 1997 in Florida. Several receptions in conjunction with the games are being offered to our nearly 1,000 RIC alumni residing or vacationing in Florida. Our 1997 Annual/Alumni Fund which supports scholarships for our numerous talented students will be launched in the early spring. Our reunion classes continue to meet, celebrate, and meet again because they enjoy each other and share so many fond memories. The Alumni Awards and Honor Roll tradition will return but in a different format. We'll be facilitating focus groups for input on plans for a Harvest '97, RIC's first autumn homecoming. And, of course, we'll continue the presentation of Book Awards for RI high schools talented seniors, the Golf Tournament to support the RICochet scholarship fund, and work to bridge the senior class with our Alumni Association.

RIC alumni have much to be proud of, and a strong, active Alumni Association will continue to reflect our proud history. Please continue to correspond with us, support us, and celebrate with us as we move into a new year. Your involvement has helped to ensure Rhode Island College's long-term success, and allowed others to experience all RIC has to offer.

Thank you, and happy holidays to you and your families!

Eleanor O'Neill

Edith Fogel Calderara serves on the RI Retired Teachers legislative committee.

Mary Davey is chair of the board of directors and coordinator of the Providence Chapter of Volunteer Services for Animals. She remains active in AAUW and summers in Narragansett.

Ruth McGinn Rylander enjoys spending retirement time with her grandchildren. She served for 17 years as librarian in Cumberland public schools.

Leora Balcom Sherlock and her husband recently toured the castles of Southern Spain. They crossed into Gibraltar and had a close encounter with one of the famous Simian residents. A monkey leaped into their car, grabbed the items on their dashboard, and retreated to a nearby wall to enjoy the mints and breadsticks he had stolen.

Ann Emond McKenna and her husband enjoyed the winter in Florida and plan to spend the summer at Point Judith. When in Florida, Ann does volunteer work for Hospice and the Conservancy. When in RI, she volunteers at Harvard Community Health. The oldest of her five children, Dr. Anne E. S. Carty, is a professor at Rhode Island College School of Nursing.

Margaret Briggs Billis and her husband celebrated their wedding anniversary with a cruise through the Panama Canal in December, 1995.

Eleanor Crandall Thayer has maintained a keen interest in literature, having written an historic novel and a number of ballads and lyrics. She received a prize from "The Lyric" for the latter works. Her daughters inherit her affinity for letters, one as an editor of the Narragansett Times, another as an editorial assistant.

Word has been received of the death of our classmates Virginia Kirkowski Bryden and Laura Butler Tourney.

Bea and her husband Frank a consultant with Western Geophysical, live in Houston. They have three sons and four grandsons.

A mini reunion was held on June 6th at the Wharf Tavern in Warren. Reservations were used this year and we hope that will be a trend for the reunions in between our usual every fifth year. However, eight of those reservations were "no shows". We missed you! Joe Young made the trip from Washington, DC, and Ines and Carl Steinwacke came up from Florida. So did Winnie Munger and Leon. It was so nice to have Agnes and Frank Campbell join us. Augusta LaPorte came and she was already to leave for Alaska in a day of so. Arlene Whitehead, Louise Dolan, Maynard Shusman, Virginia Wilcox, and yours truly (Annette Carpenter) rounded out the happy group. Louise will be going on her annual trip to the British Isles for an Elderhostel program. There was much reminiscing and a lot of the conversations centered on the grandchildren and all their accomplishments. Notes were read from Peggy Martin Baker, who now lives in Santa Fe, Betty Major, Esther Feldman and Regina Villalume.

A scholarship fund in the name of Marquerite C. Ormond Morey, class of 1915, has been established by her niece, Virginia Wilcox, at RIC.. The student who receives the scholarship must be at least a sophomore in the teacher preparation program, academically qualified and a RI resident.

Congratulations to Leo and Eileen Leary who are celebrating their fiftieth wedding anniversary this year.

We extend our deepest sympathy to Fay Robin Bodner upon the death of her husband, Nathaniel.

It is with sadness that we report the death of Rosemary Grimes Ryll. Our condolences to her family. We had looked forward to seeing Rosemary at our mini class reunion. She had been among the first to send in her reservation. We were informed of her untimely death by her daughter, Maralyn Perron.

45

The class has donated a seat in Gaige Auditorium in memory of Barbara Golden Larned, former class president, who died on June 24, 1995.

46

Millie Brennan Nugent writes that the class of 1946 celebrated their 50th reunion with three days of reviewing, revisiting and reviving the past. On May 16th, thirty-five members and their guests had a "happy hour" and dinner at Twenty Water Street Restaurant in Wickford. The following day's activities included a guided tour of the new and old downtown and East Side of Providence by the Preservation Society. A luncheon followed. On Saturday, class members joined the commencement procession and enjoyed graduation exercises as honored guests. After commencement, members and their guests attended a luncheon hosted by President Nazarian at his home on campus. The experience was so enjoyable that it was decided to hold reunions annually. All suggestions are welcomed.

48

The committee planning the class of 1948 reunion are: Virginia O' Connor Downey, Phyllis Horton Eagleson, Frankie Gannon Nannig, Joan Doyle Roth, Phyllis Berardi Zanini, Eleanor Crook Guerin.
